Riverfront hosts tunes

About 1,600 visit River Walk Park for live music

Quick reaction nets thief

JEFF BATTLE and colleague RAY CARREON tackled a purse snatcher in front of a local restaurant -- tying him up with a belt until police arrived

News-Ledger Editor

No, they weren't security guards – not those two men who ran down a purse-snatcher in front of Baker's Square restaurant around lunch time on Sept. 20.

The two guys were wearing U.S. Postal Service uniforms.

Jeff Battle, a window clerk at the post office's Industrial Blvd. facility, was catching up with his friend Ray Carreon near the restaurant. The site was part of letter carrier Carreon's mail route.

"I hadn't seen Ray in awhile," relates Battle. "I saw him in his (postal service) Jeep, and I was on a lunch break, so we started to converse. The next thing you know, we saw this guy run out of the Baker's Square parking lot (near Harbor Blvd.) and right behind him was a lady yelling, 'He's got my purse! He's got my purse!' "

Battle said the commotion put him "kind of in shock – but Ray said, 'We've got to go after him.' So we ran across the street, and I guess I'm a little faster than Ray, because I got to the guy first and kind of tackled him. Then Ray got ahold of him around the neck. We had him on the ground squirming, and he kept asking us to let him go. We said, 'you can't be doing this stuff and expect to get away with it.' But he kept trying to reach into his pocket for something – finally, Ray took off his belt and tied him up with it."

Battle said he and Carreon did not stick around long after a police officer interviewed them and took custody of the suspect. But he knew the theft victim got her purse back.

Further details on the incident were not immediately available from police, although the department's records indicate that the young suspect admitted to taking the woman's purse from her car. The purse and its contents were valued at $400. The same report identified Battle and Carreon as "security guards."

Did Battle ever have second thoughts about taking on the theft suspect – perhaps worrying about whether the suspect had a weapon?

"When I was holding the guy down, he did keep trying to reach into his pocket," said Battle. "You never know if he's got a knife or gun. But I don't have any regrets – you hear a woman scream, and she's in trouble, and you just react."

West Sac audits redevelopment proceeds, may ask Yolo for money back

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

West Sacramento has followed the lead from the city of Davis, engaging an auditor to look at the county's handling of the city's redevelopment agency funds. The two cities may both end up differing with Yolo County over how property tax money has been distributed – a difference that could mean the fate of millions of dollars now assigned to the county's coffers.

Val Toppenberg, West Sacramento's redevelopment director, said a private firm was still crunching the numbers for West Sacramento. He stressed that there could be a legitimate difference of opinion over how state law requires the county and redevelopment agency to share tax proceeds.

"This is not something particularly unusual with redevelopment agencies," he said two weeks ago. "It's simply taking a look at the way the redevelopment tax increment is calculated. We understand that Davis did find a discrepancy, and certainly that plays into the decision to go ahead with this (audit).".

It is the first such audit in the 11-year old city's history, he added.

West Sacramento's redevelopment area covers about 5,400 of the city's 12,000 acres. Within this area, property tax monies are distributed differently from the way they are handled outside. The issue was made more complicated in the mid-1990s, when the state's slow economy led California officials to "shift" money from local governments to local schools – using it to replace money previously provided by the state government. The new formula may have left some room for confusion, said Toppenberg.

The West Sacramento Redevelopment Agency's last budget amounted to about $6.7 million in revenue, said Toppenberg. A current disagreement could involve dollar amounts of $50,000 to $500,000 per year going back to the mid 1990s, he guessed.

Jeannie Hippler, interim city manager of Davis, said yesterday that her city has "been in potential litigation over this for the past four years." She described it as a "closed session" city council issue.

"The whole nature of the disagreement came about over how we interpret how the 'pass through' agreement (with Yolo County) was figured," she said.

Former deputy public guardian gets three years

Regional newspapers are reporting that former Yolo County Deputy Public Guardian John Hartmire has been sentenced to three years in state prison following a "no contest" plea to embezzlement charges.

The Woodland resident is also ordered to pay back over $67,000 he is believed to have taken from an elderly client's accounts. The total loss by the client is believed to be over $107,000.

Hartmire, a 44-year old Woodland resident, is a former editor of the "West Sacramento Press" newspaper. At the time he was hired as a deputy public guardian under Yolo Co. Public Guardian Cass Sylvia, he was the subject of a News-Ledger article detailing apparent plagiarism by the Press of two articles from the Davis Enterprise newspaper. He denied plagiarizing the articles, but admitted he couldn't explain how they appeared in his newspaper.

'Capitol Place' goes to city council—

The West Sacramento City Council will be asked to decide on Oct. 17 whether to rezone 9.4 acres at Sacramento and Douglas avenues to accommodate a 192-unit "market rate" apartment complex. The property is currently zoned for community commercial use.

The acreage is owned by the G.W. Williams Company, which has argued that market conditions do not favor commercial use of the site.

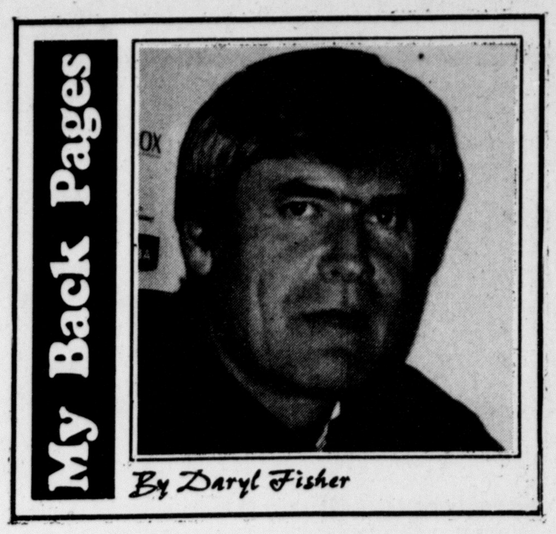

The West Sacramento planning commission has already voted against the apartment complex proposal, but the city council – as a matter of procedure – will have the final word on the rezone.

The council will convene in public session at 7 p.m. on Wed., Oct. 17.

Trying to make sense out of so much suffering—

The other night, after forcing myself to view yet another hour-long television special on all the human misery which took place at ground zero in New York City on September 11th, I found myself recalling a long ago conversation I had with an Army second lieutenant from Kentucky I met in the winter of 1970, shortly after I got back from the war in Vietnam. His name was William Menser (everyone called him Winky though) and we were both finishing out our tours of duty at a place called Fort Meade, Maryland, where he was in charge of a platoon of returning infantrymen assigned to help out with crowd control of the thousands of antiwar demonstrators who were still making their feelings about the war known in Washington D.C.. Anyway, shortly after I had been placed under his command, Lieutenant Menser came to the conclusion that I was actually more pro-demonstrator than pro-military, so one night he took me aside for a little talk. As I waited for what I was sure was going to be a lengthy lecture on how to be a better soldier to begin, he suddenly did the strangest thing -- he invited me to join his Bible study group.

"I'm afraid you're talking to the wrong person," I said as politely as I could.

"But why not come just once?" he asked me.

"Let's just say that me and God are not on real good terms right now," I answered.

"I'm afraid the war in Vietnam has done that to a lot of returning soldiers," he said. "But come on, give it a try, what do you have to lose?"

One thing led to another, and before I knew it, we were sitting next to each other on a park bench trying to make sense out of all the human suffering going on in the world in general, and Vietnam in particular. At the time, I didn't know the man from Adam, but I was immediately struck by how kind and compassionate he was. And since kindness is always in short supply in this world, I decided to hear him out.

"Have you ever read the Bible?" was one of the questions he asked me.

"Parts of it," I said.

"Well," he explained, "one of the major themes in the Bible is human suffering. It has always been with us and it always will be."

"Why is that?"

"This is just my opinion," he assured me, "but I think part of it has to do with the fact that suffering is one of the few things which can make us more compassionate, more sensitive, more charitable, more capable of loving others. In other words, it makes us more god-like, and in my way of thinking, more acceptable in the presence of God."

"You mean when a person goes to heaven?"

"Right, and the sooner we can pick up the qualities which suffering can actually help give us, the sooner we can get off this earth and move on to bigger and better things."

"So," I said, trying to make some sense of what he was telling me, "you're saying that the guys who skate through life, the people who don't do much suffering, the ones who get all the breaks, the ones who don't have to die young in a stupid war, the ones who seem to live forever without contributing much of anything to anyone, those aren't the lucky ones?"

"Exactly. In fact, if you aren't suffering from time to time in this world, and if you aren't aware of all the other suffering which is going on all around you, then you are probably doing something really wrong."

I'm afraid I never did spend much time attending the second lieutenant's Bible study classes, but I've always been thankful for our little talk on that cold, clear winter night when I was stuck on the wrong coast playing civilian solider. The understanding that suffering can have an upside if we insist on it has often helped me try to put the unimaginable -- like what happened on September 11th -- into a perspective I can better grasp and even pretend to understand.

I think C.S. Lewis may have said it best when he wrote: "Something must drive us out of our own self and into the world of others -- and that something is suffering."

Or, as Anthony Hopkins simply says in the last line of the movie "Shadowlands" (which is about the life of C.S. Lewis), "Pain is part of the happiness -- that's the deal."

SPORTS INSIDER

By Richard Novoa

The Barry-watch continues with only nine games remaining on the Giants schedule for Bonds to tie or set a new home run record. Bonds hit his 69th home run Friday night against the Padres, but don't expect the Astros or Dodgers to give him to many good pitches to hit in the final week of the season. Bonds will break the record on the last day of the season against them darn Dodgers!

The division leading Diamondbacks are still holding on to their two game lead over the Giants while St. Louis maintains their three game lead for the wild card spot. The Giants will travel to Houston for a three-game series before they return to Pac Bell Park for the season-ending three-game weekend series against the Dodgers. If the Giants and Diamondbacks end up in a tie for the division title, there will be a one game playoff game decided by a coin toss.

Undefeated Felix Trinidad got the shock of his life last Saturday night at Madison Square Garden in New York when Bernard Hopkins stopped in him in the 12th round of their middleweight title fight. The 36-year old Hopkins, who calls himself the "The Executioner," outgunned the Puerto Rican champion with lots of movement and a two-barrel attack on the heavily favored champion. The victory gave Hopkins (40-2-1, 29 KO's) a nice payday that earned him $2.5 million, while Trinidad earned $9 million. Hopkins has already offered Trinidad a rematch but this time he will get the $9 million and Felix will have to settle for measly $2 million.

Also, in local boxing it looks like West Sacramento's boxing champion, Willie Jorrin, is ready to return to the ring with a tentatively set date of December 21st at the Arco Arena. Jorrin, who has been inactive for almost a year, will defend his title against, No. 1 contender, Michael Brodie of England.

The Oakland Raiders (2-1) will be at home this Sunday (1:15 p.m.-ch.13) and the Las Vegas odds makers have the Silver and Black as 19 ½ point favorites over the Dallas Cowboys! The game is not sold out yet and maybe blacked out again in Northern California unless you can get channel 12 in Chico!

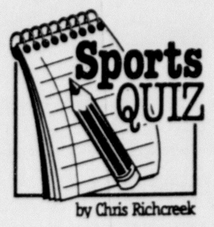

The Raiders really poured it on the hapless Seahawks last Sunday beating Seattle 38-14. Ex-49er Jerry Rice had a field day, scoring two touchdowns in his new Silver and Black uniform.

Speaking of the 49ers (2-1) they used a new running attack to amass 233 yards and managed to hang on to a 19-17 win over the New York Jets. The new balance attack was lead by Kevan Barlow, who rushed for 83 yards and Garrison Hearst's 95-yard performance.

The 49ers will be at home this Sunday (5:30 p.m.-ESPN) for the late game against the Carolina Panthers. Just think about it! Bay Area football fans could actually watch the Raiders in Oakland and then drive across the bridge to San Francisco to see the Niners at 5:30 p.m. Two NFL game in one day or how about watching the Giants and Mr. Bonds battle the Dodgers (1 p.m.) to close out the season at Pac Bell then head over to 3Com Park for the Niners and Panthers! I love it - Only in America!

I won all 3 of my weekly NFL picks in week three with the Rams, Giants and 49ers all winning their game out right to improve my season record to 6 wins and 3 losses. This week I like the 49ers (NL) at home and Tampa Bay (+3) over the Packers. I like the points on Monday night with the Detroit Lions (+11 ½), who had a bye last week, to slow down the Rams offense.

See ya next week!

West Sacramento
Firefighters Association

To the Citizens of West Sacramento:

This a letter of appreciation for the generosity that you have shown to our brothers and sisters of the Fire Department of New York. On Tuesday, September 11, 2001, we all watched in horror and disbelief as the United States was attacked by terrorists. The immense loss of life in New York and Washington D.C. was something that was unfathomable and uncomfortable to deal with as a nation, but we rose to the occasion.

We as members of the Sacramento Area Fire Fighters Union Local #522 chose to support these families because of the strong ties we feel for all fire fighters worldwide. The occupation we have chosen is not just a job but a way of life. We develop strong familial relationships with these individuals and to lose a fellow fire fighter is to lose a member of the family.

The West Sacramento Fire Fighters Association on behalf of the Sacramento Fire Fighters Union Local #522 began to accept donations to directly help the families of our fallen comrades. On Sunday and Monday you opened your hearts and generously supported our effort to aid these grief stricken families and we thank you from the bottom of our hearts. We witnessed both the young and the old assist us in our effort. Some of our young citizens saw fit to donate their earnings from a day of mowing lawns while others emptied their piggy banks. The West Sacramento Fire Fighters Association with your generous support was able to raise over $36,000 for these families bringing the Sacramento Area Fire Fighters Union total to over 1.25 million dollars. A huge sum that pales in comparison to the loss of a father or mother, a friend, and a fellow brother or sister of the Fire Service.

Thank you for helping our FDNY brothers and sisters,

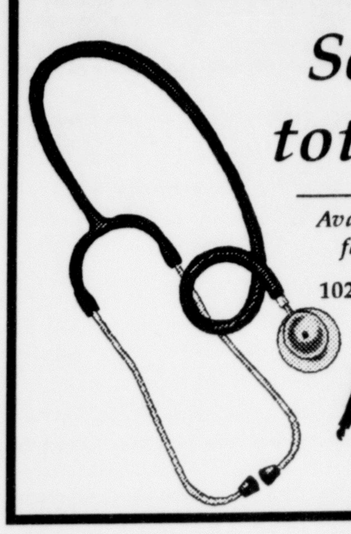

Sincerely,

Wally Enos

TOURING with TEDDI

I must confess I'm having a love affair with the beautiful Napa Valley.

Of course, I'm not the only one – over a million people come from all over the world to enjoy the valley's serenity and beauty. Most are as delighted as I am to find it's also abundant in things to do, places to go, and unusual gourmet delights.

High above the valley floor sits the monastic Sterling Winery where you travel by Alpine Tram to a self-guided tour. Or soar above it all in a glider flight at Calistoga airport. Still on a high? Try a hot air balloon ride drifting over rivers, homes, farms and vineyards. Any morning about 6:30 or 7 a.m., visitors and locals alike are treated to the sight of as many as 14 balloons floating along like multicolored tops playing in the sky. "Napa Valley Balloons" launches from the parking lot at Domaine Chandon, while "Adventures Aloft" launches from the lot at Vintage 1870 in Yountville.

If you wish to savor the smell of grapes and the beauty of the valley from a closer view, perhaps bicycling is your forte. Rental places may be found in Napa, Yountville, Calistoga and St. Helena.

The unique quality of the valley's many bed & breakfast inns is one of its main attractions. Be sure to call first, as most are booked weeks – even months – in advance. If you try during the week, you may find yourself lucky enough to get accommodations. Everyone should stay at least one pampered night at the Magnolia Hotel in Yountville, with its lace bedspreads, antique furnishings and complimentary wine and breakfast. Perhaps the unique Webber House is your fancy, with its claw tub in your room.

The valley is home to many restaurants from the renowned French Laundry in St. Helena to the Old Adobe in Napa, the second oldest building in Northern California.

Well, this should be enough to get your interest in the Napa Valley started. "Touring with Teddi" will be taking a bus trip to Napa in February. If you are interested, give me a call at (916) 372-5110.

I do not like to give a completely negative review, but once in awhile I find I must, and this is one of those times. I do not let the restaurant I am reviewing know who I am and that I am writing a review of their establishment, because I want to get the same service you can expect when you go.

I went to the Monterey Bay Cannery restaurant on Bercut Dr. for lunch last Friday. On the same street, you have Lyon's, The Hungry Hunter, a barbecue restaurant, and last, but not least, the Rusty Duck. None of the above (except for Lyon's) was open at 11 a.m., so we opted for the Cannery at 11:15 a.m. The atmosphere is pleasant, reminding one of an actual cannery in Monterey with its open ceiling, exposed pipes and wiring, and they have softened it with lots of hanging plants, and pictures of Monterey and San Francisco.

A pleasant young lady named Jamie waited on us and gave us good service, but unfortunately, that's all I can say nice about the establishment. They are a little too pricey for a chain restaurant (owned by Aloha Management) for lunch, especially on a regular basis. Their salads are priced from $7.50 to $11.50; pastas are $8.50-$12.95; burgers and sandwiches are $7.25 to $9.50. I happen to love clams on the half shell (which they call "shooters"). At $1.95 per, a plate of six clams would cost almost $12. A bowl of not-so-great chowder (Westside Pub is better!) is $5.50, and add a salad and it is $7.25. Entrees are $9.50 to $12.25, steaks are $10.50 to $13.50. My friend had a skewered seafood dish and the shrimp and scallops were overcooked and tough. I had a beer-battered halibut, which was very good, but the cole slaw left a lot to be desired. The check for two people came to about $30 – as I say, a little pricy for a senior's pocketbook.

Monterey Bay Cannery: 400 Bercut Dr., Sacramento, 441-3474.

Are you a soup lover? Now that winter is approaching, I look forward to some great lunches of soup tureens and fresh bread. Nick's Diner makes a mean beef barley soup. Westside Pub has delicious chowder and onion soup, Vince's has terrific minestrone – well, you get the idea. On a cold day, wam soup is like manna from heaven.

Why pitch nine innings when you can get just as famous pitching two?

OPINION

Letters to the Editor

Get a grip

I agree with the letter writer Karl Machschefes that John Lucas has adequately apologized for going off the deep end (I've done that a few times myself). Those involved have been gracious and the subject is best dropped.

Unfortunately, Mr. Machschefes went on to say that Americans need to "put things in the proper perspective" and realize that the "real hate crimes" have been committed by Osama Bin Laden, Ice-T, and Rep. Dick Gephart. Now that's a strange trio -- a fanatic mass murderer, a rap gangster, and a highly respected leader of the Democratic Party.

Golly Gee Karl, anyone can see you have a strong grip on reality!! But you better hang on to your hat as well, because Richard Gephart, a champion of hard working families, may will be the next President of the United States. I only hope that senior citizens forced to choose between food and medicine can hold on another three long years.

West Sacramento

The three-minute clock

On September 19, 2001, I attended the West Sacramento Council meeting to seek out answers after being referred by Cal-Trans, as to why Cal-Trans wanted to acquire a 10-foot easement on my property (3320 Jefferson Boulevard) for utility purposes on the west side of Jefferson. I also desired to inquire why Cal-Trans wanted to extend the ditch ten feet back on their right away property from Tower Mart at South Linden Road to Davis Road.

Prior to attending the city council meeting, I had contacted City Community Development, and I was successful in ascertaining answers regarding the requested utility easement and rationale for movement of the request to move the ditch. An employee who worked for the city told me that, "it was a Cal-Trans project and that he did not know", therefore I elected to seek out answers from out city council. My proposal to Cal-Trans was to provide them with pipe for the ditch, however Cal-Trans informed me that they could not install the pipe in the ditch because the city of West Sacramento was "planning to dig the ditch back up in two years and install their own pipe." I therefore went to the city council meeting to obtain information regarding the following:

1. Resolution to the above stated issue regarding my property.
2. Understand rationale why Marshall Road is currently under construction to widen and repave, including installation of sewer and water pipe. I was told the residents on Marshall Road will not have access to this sewer. The city will have the pipe already in when they allow hook up to the city sewer system and "they do not have to dig up the road twice."
3. There are additional plans (according to the city developer), at Bridgeway Island to open Bridgeway Island traffic to Marshall Road, on to Jefferson Boulevard by the end of 2001. I am told this would bring 800 cars at peak hours between 7-9 a.m down Marshall Road, heading towards Jefferson. At present time we experience consistent traffic problems on Jefferson between 7:30-8 a.m. traffic. It is backed up one mile from the Linden Road light.

Upon arrival to the city council meeting to address the above issues, I requested to address the council on Agenda 1a. As I approached the podium to address the council, I said, "Good evening, I am Tom Julian", and I then observed a red digital clock sitting in front of the mayor. (A three minute timer ticking down. I was not informed there would be a three-minute presentation cut-off).

Immediately the clock starts as I started to speak (not being told this would occur). At this moment, however, there were microphone problems and it did not work. There was one minute and 23 seconds before the microphone began working. As I began speaking, the clock went to three minutes. I was not even allowed the three minutes of presentation that I was afforded.

At this time, the mayor informed me that if I had a lengthy discussion, I needed to submit this in writing or put it on an agenda item.

After total frustration and humiliation in attempting to speak to the city council in front of the three minute timer (which cut me off), I will no longer waste my time addressing the council on pertinent issues. My question to the mayor (windbag): "Can you resolve issues using your three-minute clock?"

I respectfully entertain any comments. And may I recommend to the city council that they remind citizens of West Sacramento there is a time limitation of freedom of speech and protocol that should be articulated to the public prior to every council meeting. I have lost respect in the council members of West Sacramento with this unfortunate process.

Lessons learned

A lesson surely learned during and after the destruction of the Twin Tower buildings in New York City: Ineffective escape routes, especially for those who find it difficult or impossible to negotiate the stairways, since the warning over the years in elevators has been, "In case of emergency, use stairways." But one must have wondered immediately, "How do those who rely solely on elevators escape?"

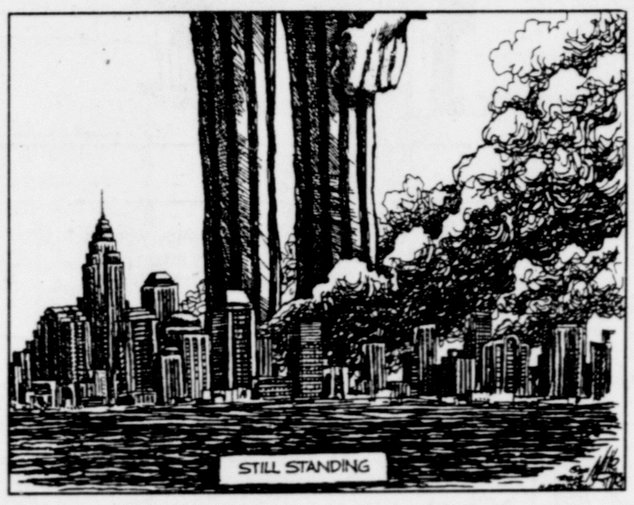

Perhaps stairways should be replaced or supplemented by wide floor-to-floor slanted ramps with a flat area for each floor. Engineers could come up with something to hang onto above with or without power. And just as those riding waterways should wear life-saving float devices, maybe high building occupants should be required by law to have a parachute available.

And how about those new big buildings being built around the state capitol, supposedly to bring all of our state departments geographically closer together? Personally, I don't like the idea as it makes destruction too tempting for terrorists.

But since the framework of those new buildings-to-be is not yet complete, this would seem like a prudent time to review and revise the infrastructures to assure the inclusion of floor-to-floor ramps, even at the expense of some floor space. To make up for lost floor space, maybe it's time for bunk desks.

Lastly, it is time that building inspectors nationwide add to their staff, even if only part time, big guys and big gals in wheelchairs and assure restroom wheelchair accessibility for new and refurbished buildings, be they public or business structures, as mandated by the Americans with Disabilities Act of (about) 1990.
